Martin Patching

Target for Patching

WATFORD, busier than most clubs on the transfer front this season, may well call it a day after making four signings — Wilf Rostron, Mick Henderson, Eric Steele and Martin Patching.

The signing of Patching took Watford's spending spree to £500,000 in two months and he could be the last link in the chain as Watford search for Second Division stability.

Watford, with Ross Jenkins — their 26-goal star of last season — out of action this term following an ankle break, have not found it easy in the scoring stakes.

Midfielders Rostron and Patching can go a long way to offsetting the deficit.

Rostron grabbed 11 goals in 34 appearances for Sunderland last season and Patching, in his most successful season for Wolves, grabbed 7 goals in 34 games.

Patching, happy playing as a midfielder or forward, always looked on Derek Dougan as his hero. "I couldn't see enough of him," says Patching. "He was the greatest for me."

Well, Dougan, of Portsmouth, Blackburn, Aston Villa, Peterborough, Leicester, Wolves and Northern Ireland fame, certainly knew plenty about the scoring business.

So, perhaps a lot of that may rub off on Patching, a player so keen to do well after making only 79 appearances for Wolves in five seasons.

Tulsa import for Leicester

THERE aren't many England-born players who can say they were spotted and signed by a Football League side while playing for an American team.

But 20-year-old centre-half Nigel Hart can. After a spell with Wigan Athletic, he played in three games for Tulsa Roughnecks against Leicester, Shrewsbury and Derby. Leicester then watched him play at Derby on the Wednesday, invited him to watch their game with Sunderland on the Saturday and signed him after that match.

Mind you, he comes from good stock. His dad Johnny was a Manchester City stalwart and his brother is the Leeds and former Stockport and Blackpool centre-half.

MATCH VIEW VOL 1 No. 20

SO Alan Ball is set to leave Southampton later this year and after spending a summer with Vancouver Whitecaps may return to negotiate his own contract with a new club, possibly in the Second Division.

What a loss for ambitious Lawrie McMenemy that would be — and what a loss for the South Coast club who have enjoyed so much of the inspiration Ball pours into his game.

It appears that a small section of The Dell crowd would be held responsible for the little redhead going on his way. If so, Ball may well have over-reacted to the hostile attentions of the minority — but how sheepish some of those so-called fans will feel if Ball does part company with Southampton.

Why have characters like these two little men contributed so much to the game? Without doubt, the major reason is their great love of football.

His spirit was particularly apparent one frosty night last winter as Southampton trailed 2-0 to Wolves at Molineux. The referee had checked full-time with both linesmen and was near to blowing the final whistle, yet Ball still exploded when a colleague failed to dispute a 50-50 ball with an oncoming Wolves' player. That's the sort of spirit every fan should crave for in his team.

Southampton will miss the little man if he goes on his way. But whatever he decides to do next winter, MATCH WEEKLY wishes him well. The game needs his brand of enthusiasm.

Oakey's a snip at just £70,000

IT'S good to see full-back Graham Oakey in League action again. Oakey, signed by Swindon on a month's loan from Coventry, could prove quite an asset to the Wiltshire side.

Oakey, just back after two years of misery — he didn't make one appearance last term for Coventry — was twice the victim of a nasty knee injury.

He looked a great prospect when making his League debut in the 2-2 draw against Manchester City in September, 1974, and went on to win the club's Player-of-the-Year award as he gave some outstanding displays. The 25-year-old could prove quite a bargain at £70,000!

Graham Oakey — £70,000 move to Swindon after two years of misery.

Israel date for Ireland . . .

WORLD Cup fever will soon be on us. Northern Ireland are set to hit the '82 trail in three months time with an away match against Israel.

The fixture — due to be played on March 26 — will be the first in Group 6 which also includes Sweden, Portugal and Scotland.

Scotland, however, must wait until September 10 for their first match — away to Sweden.

On that same day England will begin their bid to reach the finals in Spain with a Group 4 match against Norway at Wembley.

The full list of all-important dates for the two groups is as follows:

Group 4: England v Norway (September 10); Norway v Rumania (Sept. 24); Rumania v England (Oct. 15); Switzerland v Norway (Oct. 29); England v Switzerland (Nov. 19); England v Rumania (April 29, 1981); Hungary v Rumania (May 13); Norway v Hungary (May 20); Switzerland v England (May 30); Rumania v Norway (June 3); Hungary v England (June 6); Norway v England (Sept. 9); Rumania v Hungary (Sept. 23); Rumania v Switzerland (Oct. 10); Hungary v Switzerland (Oct. 14); Hungary v Norway (Oct. 31); Switzerland v Rumania (Nov. 7); England v Hungary (Nov. 18). (Date of the Norway v Switzerland fixture still to be decided.)

Group 6: Israel v Northern Ireland (March 26); Sweden v Israel (June 18); Sweden v Scotland (Sept. 10); Northern Ireland v Sweden and Scotland v Portugal (Oct. 15); Israel v Sweden (Nov. 12); Portugal v Northern Ireland (Nov. 19); Portugal v Israel (Dec. 17); Israel v Scotland (Feb. 25, 1981); Scotland v Northern Ireland (March 25); Northern Ireland v Portugal and Scotland v Israel (April 29); Sweden v Northern Ireland (June 3); Sweden v Portugal (June 17 or 24); Scotland v Sweden (Sept. 9); Portugal v Sweden (Oct. 14); Israel v Portugal (Oct. 28); Portugal v Scotland and Northern Ireland v Israel (Nov. 18).

IAM McFaul, former Newcastle United goalkeeper and now coach to the Second Division promotion-chasing club, is in line to succeed Danny Blanchflower as Northern Ireland's manager. If Arsenal's Terry Neill does not accept the job, and it is most unlikely then McFaul is favourite.

Gregg stays put

Germany — final piece of eight!

WEST Germany made up the final piece of the European Championship jigsaw when, as expected, they qualified for the finals in Rome by beating Turkey 2-0.

They join Italy, England, Belgium, Spain, Holland, Czechoslovakia and Greece in the draw which will be made on January 16.

WHAT A GOAL!

A MOMENT of magic as Osvaldo Ardiles (out of picture) steers in the goal that won Tottenham their titanic replay struggle with Manchester United.

Tottenham's Terry Gibson (centre) celebrates while Micky Thomas (left) and Jimmy Nicholl (right) watch Gary Bailey's despairing dive in horror. It was a killer blow which gave real meaning to the tiny Argentinian's burning desire to play in a Wembley Cup Final. And why not? They won't come much harder than Manchester United at Old Trafford. Now Spurs prepare for another stern test — Swindon away in Round Four.

Left: A job well done! Glenn Hoddle, who took over in goal after Milija Aleksic was carried off with a broken jaw, defied United's attack for over an hour.

Right: Well done son! Terry Yorath, so powerful at the heart of Tottenham's defence, congratulates a tired but triumphant Ardiles.

SATURDAY SNIPPETS

THERE have been nearly three times as many home penalty goals as away successes this season. It was four times on Saturday when eight home players and only two visitors scored from penalties.

MORE wins on Saturday for clubs hot on the promotion trail who have managers in their first full season were chalked up by Chelsea (Geoff Hurst), Walsall (Alan Buckley) and Huddersfield Town (Mick Buxton).

ALAN Brown's hat-trick for Sunderland in Saturday's 4-0 win over Oldham was only the season's ninth in the Second Division. There have been ten in the First Division only four in the Third and seven in the Fourth. Of to 30 total the only two from non-Englishmen came from Fulham Welshman Gordon Davies and Bristol Rovers Eire international Miah Dennehy.

BOLTON'S defeat on Saturday, which left them with only one victory in 24 matches, leaves them in danger of setting up a new record for the fewest wins in a season by any First Division team in the last 60 years. The fewest in that time: four each by QPR in 1968-69 and Blackpool in 1970-71.

SATURDAY saw the season's sending-off cases in Football League matches only rise to 66 and that's three more than at the same stage last year.

STILL another Hillsborough defeat left Sheffield Wednesday as the only team among the 92 with more away than home points. No wonder manager Jack Charlton is baffled by such a Jekyll-Hyde element!

EX-SCOTTISH international Peter Lorimer's goal for York City was his 162nd in Football League matches. The only current non-Englishman who has scored more are Ted MacDougall (Bournemouth) with 253 and Swansea player-manager John Toshack (167).

RELEGATION looms nearer than ever after further defeats for three clubs with first-season managers: Derby County (Colin Addison), Charlton Athletic (Mike Bailey) and Bury (Dave Connor).

Saints alive! Liverpool drop a point

"CRISIS, crisis, I suppose we've got another crisis on our hands now," said Ray Kennedy with a chuckle as he walked past the press ranks after Liverpool's surprise 1-1 draw at home to Southampton on Saturday.

It summed up the way Liverpool are viewed now by the rest of the country, although skipper Phil Thompson was not unduly surprised by the visitors' success.

"They've got a lot of experienced players in the side who are not put off by the Kop and the big fellows at the back, Chris Nicholl and Dave Watson, played very well," he said.

A booking for Alan Ball marred what could well be his last appearance at Anfield.

Naturally he was pleased with a point. "I'm also happy because the club's heading the right way," he said.

"We set our stall out today. You've got to get players out to attack Liverpool. It's no good getting penned into your own half because there will be no way out."

As he left Anfield, 'Ballie' couldn't resist commenting on the uncertainty surrounding his future. With a wry smile and in reference to Liverpool's great rivals, he said: "If a coaching job comes up down the road put my name down for it!"

PHIL BOYER'S first away goal in the league put him clear at the top of the First Division scoring chart with 20. It was enough to earn Southampton a point at Liverpool for whom Terry McDermott scored from the penalty spot.

'Lee must earn right to play' says Hurst

CHELSEA boss Geoff Hurst says of his new signing Colin Lee: "He's got to earn the right to get into the team."

And judging by Chelsea's performance against promotion rivals Newcastle on Saturday that won't be easy.

Added Hurst: "The policy is not just to buy players when you are bottom of the table. There is no pressure on Colin to get straight into the team."

"Probably the worst thing that happened to him at Tottenham was scoring four goals on his debut — it put so much pressure on him."

'New England' WINNERS

YOUR chance to pick The New England, and show Ron Greenwood just where he's going wrong, brought such a massive response that our team of judges, headed by Wolves' manager John Barnwell, really had to burn the midnight oil.

And it was no easy task. Your brief had been to name an International squad who hadn't appeared for their country before. So the likes of Clemence and Hughes, Latchford and Barnes were definitely out.

Many of the choices, however, showed tremendous imagination and turned up some tremendous alternatives to the current England squads. "I was so impressed with some that I think I'll go out and buy a few of those suggested," laughed John Barnwell.

On a more serious note, he complimented the entrants for producing squads which showed real balance and potential for the future.

"Some of these lads have put tremendous thought into their selections. I congratulate them all," he said.

The winners are listed below with Richard Clark, of Hinckley, Leics., named as the lad with the best squad of all. All of them will get a day out with a top player.

Honeymoon hitch

HONEYMOON plans for Crystal Palace's Peter Nicholas and his new bride Janice (pictured) had to play second fiddle to the F.A. Cup.

The couple had planned to spend a couple of days in South Wales after the Third Round cup-tie with Swansea.

But the match finished a draw and Peter had to return to Palace to prepare for the replay at Selhurst Park.

Said Peter who wed Janice on December 22 — the only free Saturday he's had this season:

"Obviously we were both a bit disappointed, but that's the way things go. We had some time together on the Saturday after the game but the honeymoon will have to be in the summer now."

Scottish Cup

HOLDERS Rangers have been drawn away to First Division Clyde in the third round of the Scottish Cup.

Runners-up last year — Hibernian — will be away to either Meadowbank Thistle or Stranraer.

The full draw (ties to be played on January 26) is: Airdrie v St Johnstone; Alloa v East Fife v Hearts; Arbroath v Aberdeen; Berwick v Stenhousemuir or Peterhead; Celtic v Raith; Clyde v Rangers; Clydebank v Stirling A; Coldstream or Queen of the South v Motherwell; Dumbarton v Ayr; Dundee United v Dundee; Dunfermline v Buckie Thistle or Brora Rangers; Morton v Cowdenbeath; Hamilton v Keith; Kilmarnock v Partick Thistle; St Mirren v Brechin or Montrose; Stranraer or Meadowbank v Hibernian.

STEVE BLOW TO SAINTS

YOUNG Southampton midfielder Steve Williams — so instrumental in the Saints' good form in the League this season — has been plagued by a mystery stomach strain.

Williams — looked on by some as a player who might figure in future plans of England manager Ron Greenwood — made an impressive start to the season.

Recently, however, his form for Southampton has been somewhat sketchy and that was probably a significant feature of the Saints' defeat by Birmingham in the Third Round of the F.A. Cup.

After the match the club were said to be having a close look at Williams' problem — described as a 'deep-seated stomach strain'.

Just whether Williams' problem will mean a short rest from the game or whether it is something more serious remains to be seen.

Undoubtedly Saints' fans will be hoping the young star is once more buzzing again and back to full fitness.

Steve Williams . . . mystery injury.

CONGRATULATIONS to Emlyn Hughes awarded the O.B.E. in the Queen's New Year's Honours list.

The Wolves' skipper, who picked up almost all the glittering prizes when leading Liverpool to glory in the Seventies said: "It was really hard keeping it a secret for a month."

"It is a great honour, not only for me but for my profession."

"There's only one medal left for me to win now — and that's the League Cup. Wouldn't it be ironic if Wolves reached the final and beat Liverpool to take the title?"

Gould: Why 'No' to Rovers

BOBBY Gould spoke of his decision to turn down the manager's job at Bristol Rovers and revealed: "It doesn't mean I don't want a job as number one."

Gould, assistant manager at Chelsea, but more of a managerial partner to Geoff Hurst, told MATCH WEEKLY:

"It was traumatic. It was a tremendous decision to have to make so early in my managerial career, but it was really loyalty to Geoff that swung it."

"He was emphatic that he wanted me at Chelsea and I knew I wasn't coming here just to carry the balls. It is a partnership thing."

"But it was a tremendous offer from Bristol. I've got a lovely house down there and the salary was better than I'm getting. If the offer had come a couple of years later I might have been swayed."

"I wouldn't have liked to have been the one to rock the boat at Chelsea, but it's not that I don't want to be the number one at some stage. It was a case of doing what was right at the time," said Gould.

He hasn't lost any sleep over the decision because, he says: "I always sleep." But he added: "You always have some regrets whatever decision you make."

Thousands of Chelsea fans will be delighted that the managerial team that has taken their team to the top of Division Two is to remain unaltered.

Luton's new White hope

STEVE White, Luton's recent £175,000 signing from Bristol Rovers, will be hoping he has much more success than his former striker partner Paul Randall had when he moved to a new club.

Both players signed professional at Bristol Rovers within a month of each other in the summer of 1977 and they made their League debuts in the season which followed.

Now White has followed Randall to another club — and at the same fee. But Randall, who cracked in 20 goals in 28 appearances for Rovers in 1977–78 and managed 13 from 21 games before moving to Stoke in December, 1978, did not find the going easy at the Victoria Ground.

He made 20 appearances that term for Stoke but could only muster 5 goals. This season his games have been limited and the goals have dried up.

White, who hit 24 goals in 49 League appearances for Rovers, has been given a careful introduction to the Kenilworth Road scene. Luton are looking to him to add to their goals haul as they make a strong bid for promotion to the First Division.

Luton manager David Pleat says: "White is quick and aggressive. He is only 21 and will improve — and it's up to us to help make him better."

NEXT WEEK: My new role by Peter Barnes, of West Brom

My respect for Villa

IN THE alphabet of football League clubs Aston Villa, our opponents at Old Trafford on Saturday, immediately follow Arsenal and it is fitting that they should be together because both clubs have fine footballing traditions and everything about them has a little touch of class.

For this reason alone it was with mixed feelings that I left Villa Park earlier on in the season after we had beaten them 3-1. Obviously I was delighted at the two points we had gained but I was also a little sad at the atmosphere within Villa Park that day.

From the very start of the season there have been rumblings in the newspapers about boardroom unrest and when Andy Gray and John Gidman asked for transfers it seemed that this unrest had been passed on to the players. Villa's poor start this season only echoed these feelings.

As I have said, on the day we beat Villa 3-1, but it was a very close game and to be quite honest the score flattered us a little. Yet on the radio on the coach coming home it seemed that half of Birmingham was phoning in to the local station calling for the heads of Ron Saunders and most of his team.

But Saunders stuck to his guns. He did what many people felt was committing professional suicide and sold Andy Gray and John Gidman and he began to buy players to rebuild the team and indeed the spirit within that team.

Slowly but surely the new men in his line up began to gell with the established players and results began to improve. The situation is such that at this moment Villa are very handily placed for a stab at Europe next season and are comfortably through to the fourth round of the cup, so it is with a lot more respect that we face a much happier Aston Villa club this Saturday.

It would no doubt have been in our interest if Villa's squabbles had continued, but I feel that it is for the good of football that at long last the quarrels are over and the rumour-mongers in the national press have to look elsewhere for the headlines.

It would seem that all Villa's new players will take more than their fair share of praise for Villa's recovery so I would like to air, not only mine, but most professionals' views about the backbone of Villa.

By the backbone I mean the players who have come through the troubles unscathed and want to fight on for the club. Players like Rimmer, McNaught, Swain, Mortimer, Cowans and Little.

Gordon Cowans . . . proved me wrong when I first saw him play.

Most footballers recognise and respect talent in other players and I should think that this season these players will have grown in stature in many professionals' eyes.

Gordon Cowans in particular is apparently playing very well and I always remember the first time I played against him. It was at Old Trafford on a very rainy day. Out walked Gordon in kit that seemed three sizes too large and with legs so skinny that you thought he was guaranteed to tire and be substituted.

Appearances can be deceptive and at the end of 90 minutes I was still waiting for him to tire or even slow down a gear.

The beauty of football is its unpredictability. As a player, one week you can be world class and the next struggling to hold your place in the reserves. As a manager, one month you can be publically hung drawn and quartered and the next you can be put forward for Prime Minister - ask Ron Saunders!

Before I go I must just say a big thank you to everyone who sent me a Christmas Card.

See you soon. . . .

Steve Coppell

"You go your way Willie, I'll go mine" . . . Here I just avoid a tackle from Arsenal's Willie Young in the recent clash at Old Trafford. Looking on is John Devine.

The Liverpool Story

by Trevor
Haylett

FOUR-PAGE SPECIAL ON 10-YEARS OF RED DOMINATION

Bill Shankly – the man who started it all with a football philosophy that appealed to Liverpool followers everywhere.

Bob Paisley – he carried on the good work when Shankly retired and led Liverpool to two European Cup wins.

The picture that says it all (above) as Emylyn Hughes holds aloft the European Cup after the 1977 triumph in Rome.
The style that's carried Liverpool to so much success . . . Kenny Dalglish blasts in their third goal in this season's 4-0 victory against Manchester City.

THE TRAINING ground was falling apart, the pitch was a mess and Liverpool were struggling to get out of the Second Division when Bill Shankly first stamped his huge personality on Anfield.

But the man who was soon looked upon as the Messiah of Merseyside knew that he was in on the start of something big.

At the training ground Shankly, full of red-hot passion, told the only reporter at his first press conference: "Put in your newspaper that this is where Liverpool Football Club will be made great."

"Whether he wrote it or not I don't know, but I meant what I said," Shankly said.

"I had to get the training sorted out before anything else took shape. On my first day I came down with two big bags of balls.

"Jimmy Melia was a player here then and I saw his eyes light up. I said: 'You can forget about lapping the pitch from now on, son'."

So 'Shanks', as he was affectionately known throughout football, had sown the seeds for the Liverpool Story.

But what an incredibly huge flower it blossomed into. Shanks knew he was on a winner when he took the job but even he, the supreme optimist, could not have foreseen such a dramatic decade as the 1970's when Liverpool swept all before them.

"Liverpool Football Club is an institution," Shankly says. "Success breeds success and that's what it's all about."

"The secret is simplicity and organisation. I'd seen what had happened at other clubs when a manager left, so three years before I retired I made plans for the future.

"I shuffled the pack of trainers and promoted Bob Paisley to my assistant and Joe Fagan and Ronnie Moran up the line.

"It meant that when I decided

SHANKLY INDOCTRINATED ANFIELD WITH THE SLOGAN

'Losing is a dirty word' to leave in 1974 Bob could easily take my place and everybody else move up one.

"It was the same when I took control in December, 1959. I called the trainers in and said that I knew enough of their reputations to leave well alone. They had already served their apprenticeship with Liverpool so what was the sense in bringing new men in?"

"Players may not like it if you start changing things about so the best thing to do is stick to the pattern.

"Everybody at Liverpool Football Club have always worked together and I can honestly say in my 15 years I never had one argument with the coaching staff. And we were all indoctrinated with the slogan: 'Losing is a dirty word'."

Shankly's pride and passion for the game gave him a special place in the hearts of football followers on Merseyside. They had long developed a love-affair with the national game and Shanks was the spark that brought it all to life.

"All the club had when I arrived was potential," Shankly added. "I sensed that the fans would come to us if we had a good enough team.

"Being a Scot and being closely involved as a boy with Celtic and Rangers, I realised that Liverpool was a similar place to Glasgow. Talk about Liverpool people and you talk about pride and heart and enthusiasm and passion and fight.

"When I came to Anfield I came to manage on behalf of Liverpool Football Club, and the players and the staff, but above all on behalf of the people of the city. I knew that anything I did to bring success to the club would make the supporters proud of themselves and proud of their team.

"At the end of the day, the game belongs to the supporters and anybody in the game who chastises them should go and stand on the terraces.

"I once saw a policeman take a scarf off a boy on the Kop and throw it away. I told him to go and pick it up. That scarf was precious to the lad - he'd paid good money for it.

"It's amazing the number of people who come to Anfield asking to scatter the ashes of a relative on the pitch. None of them were ever turned away - that's not the way Liverpool work.

"I know we once put a casket in the left-hand side of the goal at the Kop end and for a spell that goal seemed to lead a charmed life. I said at the time that the casket was heading the ball away!"

Shankly obviously loves talking about the Merseyside followers who were all welcomed into the Anfield family.

He loves talking about players even more. You get the feeling interviewing him that he must live on a desert island - so keen is he to tell you about 'my lads', the players who not only brought success but pride and dignity to Liverpool F.C.

Shankly's first great team began to take shape in the early 1960s and bore fruition with League Championship wins in 1963-64, 1965-66 and an F.A. Cup victory in 1965.

"Winning the Cup in '65 was terribly important. It took the weight off our fans who were constantly being ribbed because it was a trophy we had never won before.

"It was a great team. We had big Ron Yeats at the back and he could hold a whole forward line up by himself. As we developed, the pattern of the side changed and when Phil Thompson came in we were able to start our attacks from the back because he is such a skilful performer.

"We learned from the Continentals as well and in turn had to teach the fans to be patient. We had to make ourselves and them learn that we could not score a goal every time we had the ball.

"We only used shirt numbers as a means of identifying players. We played Tommy Smith in a number ten shirt as sweeper. People said to me: 'our inside-left's not scoring many goals'. I replied: 'no, but he's stopping a few at the other end!'

"I think if the '65 team had had Ray Clemence in goal we would have won the European Cup - despite the opposition of Real Madrid and Ferencvaros, who were possibly the best teams ever to come to Anfield."

Yet another aspect of Liverpool Football Club which continually baffles others is their ability to smooth over the cracks without any duress. How many times have you read about their players in trouble or fined for misbehaviour? Shanks explains why.

"It's because they're continually reminded how lucky they are to play for Liverpool. They're told what an honour it is to play for the club.

"All our players play with common sense. They can all pass a ball and they can all control it. That's what the game's all about."

"If they misbehave they're cheating their pals. They're told not to come in if they've been misbehaving and it sinks in.

"I remember one of the only times Kevin Keegan relaxed on the pitch. Before I could get to him after the game Tommy Smith gave him a rollocking.

"When the young players come in and see people with the dignity of Kevin, Emllyn Hughes and Ray Clemence then they act accordingly."

Shanks sees most of Liverpool's home games but spends a lot of his free time now giving advice to other clubs - Wrexham and Wolves in particular.

"I've been in touch with many managers since I retired - helping them sort out their problems. I've had offers to go on the board of different clubs or work abroad.

"But I don't want to be closely involved again. It was one of the reasons why I retired because I never seemed to be at home."

Occasionally though, he will drive his red-coloured - what else? - Datsun through the gates of the training headquarters at Melwood and enjoy a cup of tea with the backroom men.

Looking at Melwood today it's hard to believe it once consisted of overgrown grass and a broken-down pavilion infested with rats.

Such is the enormous debt Liverpool Football Club owes Mr Bill Shankly.

THE LIVERPOOL STORY

THEY SAID a prayer on Merseyside for Bob Paisley when he took over as Liverpool manager from Bill Shankly. How could anyone follow 'Shanks' – King of the Kop and creator of two marvellous teams?

Yet within three years the 'pupil' had gone one better than his 'master' – and there was the gleaming European Cup as proof.

Quiet and sober to Shankly's electricity and fire, Paisley has proved that although his methods differ from those of his predecessor the end result is just as deadly.

Like Shankly, who welcomes each new day with thanks, Paisley takes nothing for granted. How else can you describe a manager who has watched his team turn in some magnificent displays in recent weeks yet still rates their Championship chances no higher than: 'We should be in with a shout.'

He also dismisses with scorn, suggestions that they are past

A PRAYER FOR PAISLEY

– and the European Cup in return had made it easy for his successor to step in. All Paisley had to do was keep the thing ticking over, strengthen the squad here and there when need be and watch the silverware come rolling in.

"All we do is go out every week, aim to do our best and are grateful for whatever we receive at the end of it," he said.

"It's no good being complacent about it. We try and improve a little bit all the way along the line. Soccer runs in cycles and at the moment the teamwork and understanding is first-class. That's why we're scoring so many goals.

"Our secret is simplicity and that's the hardest thing to achieve. It's hard not to complicate things. Simplicity and concentration – à la Geoffrey Boycott. The concentration that goes on at the training ground is absolutely unbelievable."

Paisley started off at Anfield FORTY years ago last May and was a player, reserve team manager, first-team trainer and assistant-manager before he became number one.

"I can't say I ever set out to become the manager," Paisley continued. "You take a job and do it to the best of your ability. But every job you do stands you in good stead for the ultimate task – the manager's chair."

"Had anyone forecast in 1974 that I would lead Liverpool to the golden years of the UEFA

Wembley, 1978, and an unforgettable moment as Kenny Dalglish slips the ball past 'keeper Birger Jensen to give Liverpool a 1-0 European Cup Final victory over Bruges – and so retain the trophy.

Cup and League Championship, European Cup and League Championship, European Cup again, F.A. Cup and League Cup finals and claim the Manager of the Year award in successive seasons, I would probably have laughed in their face. Because that's the stuff of which dreams are made.

"Similarly I don't want to look into the 80's and start predicting this and that. I'm not a prophet and don't like to look forward. I never look further than the next game."

He doesn't like to be drawn either on the quality of talent coming through the Anfield ranks – believing it does more harm than good to put players under the spotlight at an early age.

He has set no plans for his own withdrawal from that spotlight and says he'll keep going while he's in good health and the job doesn't get on top of him.

"Or until we lose two games in succession," says Paisley with a chuckle that sums up the success story that is Liverpool F.C.

'WHY I FOLLOW THE REDS'

I STAND on the Kop – the excitement and passion generated by all the fans makes it unthinkable to stand anywhere else. My favourite player during the decade was Dalglish – better even than the man he replaced, Kevin Keegan. Billy Stein, Anfield, Liverpool

THERE'S something about Liverpool. Other fans respect you and you're always asked back to grounds. The highlight of the 70's has to be Rome when we won the European Cup for the first time. We never seemed to stop celebrating! Mike Wills, Bootle, Liverpool the need for coaching.

Speaking before the F.A. Cup-tie with Grimsby – inevitably Liverpool won, this time by five goals – Paisley waves an arm in the direction of a practice game on one of the training pitches at Melwood.

"What do you think those players are doing today?" he asks. "They're being coached on how to cope with the demands of a heavy pitch."

"You've got to prompt players all the way along the line. Great though Stan Matthews and Tom Finney were, they would never throw away the benefit of an expert voice."

Paisley has a great knack of making everything sound so simple. Such as the way he came to take over the manager's job when Shankly retired.

"I needed the money to live on and it was one of the best jobs going at the time."

It certainly was all of that. Shanks' flair for organisation

It's May, 1974, and yet another heady moment for Liverpool as their open top team coach brings them into the City after their 3-0 F.A. Cup Final win over Newcastle United.

'WHY I FOLLOW THE REDS'

I FIRST got hooked when my grandmother bought me a Liverpool football kit. Now I hardly miss a game – and that includes all the European ties as well. It gets to the stage when you start 'collecting' grounds. I once went all the way to Plymouth for a testimonial because I'd never seen Liverpool play there. John Green, Clubmoor, Liverpool

THE LIVERPOOL STORY

TEN OF THE BEST

Ray Clemence

HE MUST have been the most amazing signing ever for sheer value. A good goalkeeper is a must because he is the last link. You can make mistakes out on the field and get away with it but if a goalkeeper makes one it's in the net. Clemence is a brilliant player and I'm convinced if we had him in the 60's side we would have won the European Cup.

Alec Lindsay

WHAT a brilliant player — but you had to force him to play. We really hammered him during training, not because we wanted to but because it was criminal to see so much talent go to waste. His greatest game was in a testimonial for Billy McNeill at Celtic. His father was a Scot and I told Alec to go out and show the great Scottish stars of the past that he could play. What an exhibition he gave that night against Jimmy Johnstone!

● Tommy Smith

Tommy Smith

TOMMY was a great player, and a clever one with it. People used to say he had no skill, but I once saw him against West Ham when they had players of the quality of Geoff Hurst and Martin Peters. Tommy stood head and shoulders above everybody else that day.

Phil Thompson

ONE of the best players there's ever been at Anfield. He is urgent and obsessed with ambition and enthusiasm. He is full of ability as all the Liverpool players are. He's a man of steel and will die for you. I used to tell my players to fight with their hearts — not their hands. Phil Thompson fights with his heart.

● Phil Thompson

WITH BILL SHANKLY

Emlyn Hughes

THE first time I saw Emlyn play I wanted to sign him. That's how sure I was of him. He's another one of the Phil Thompson mould — a marvellous competitor.

Ian Callaghan

CALLAGHAN was a train. He had unlimited energy and would run all day. Nobody covered more territory and nobody was a more selfless player. With him in the side you could change from 4-2-4 to 4-3-3 during the game. A great player.

Kevin Keegan

HE WANTED to be first in everything, first in the sprints, first over the hurdles and first lifting the weights. A genuine player — he was not a fake and everything he did was for the good of the team. He played with the spirit of a Tommy Smith. In his first game in the First Division he scored one and made another.

Kenny Dalglish

A DIFFERENT player to Keegan but both have the same effect on the team. He is so aware of the needs of the side and possesses a cunning, clever brain. He is so unselfish, like all his team-mates. Like Keegan he's been a success at two clubs — a sure sign of a great player.

● Ian Callaghan

John Toshack

ANOTHER great player who got better and better as time went on. He was a sensible footballer and I'm not surprised he's done so well in management. He's taken the gospel of Liverpool and applied it to Swansea — plus a little of his own gospel.

Steve Heighway

HE WAS a breath of fresh air to the side. He excited you with his style of playing — it was breathtaking. He was also a good clubman. If he had started his career earlier his house would be full of medals and caps by now.

Len Cantello of Bolton eager to see his team's fortunes improve

THE battle of the 'Reds' at the top of the First Division rages on and I see both Liverpool and Manchester United picking up two points on Saturday... no doubt Coventry and Aston Villa fans will be dying to see me proved wrong!

The match of the day in the Second Division is undoubtedly Birmingham City v Chelsea. It's a crucial game for both teams and I reckon they will share the spoils.

I have predicted a possible scoreline for each match — you must use your football knowledge to try and beat me.

There's a space for you to fill in your own forecast and then at 5 o'clock on Saturday you can find out who got most right.

Watch out for more predictions next week...

OLD PALS ACT

LEN Cantello prepared for the nostalgic trip to his old 'home' at the Hawthorns on Saturday and admitted: "I still feel part of the Midlands."

The sentiment is hardly surprising when you consider that he spent 13 happy and dedicated years at West Brom.

And naturally enough he is eagerly looking forward to his first game back at the Albion since his transfer to Bolton last summer.

Former team-mate and fellow midfielder Bryan Robson is still one of his closest friends in the game... although there will be no old pals when 3 o'clock comes round and the two of them begin a 90-minute battle for supremacy in the middle of the park.

On paper it should be Robson and Albion who call the tune, for although the 'Baggies' are having it far from their own way this season, Bolton have had a nightmare time.

"It's true, things look absolutely desperate for Bolton but I still feel it will be possible to escape relegation if we can get a run together."

When the teams met in the League at Burnden Park earlier in the season the match finished 0-0 and Cantello is quick to point out that there are still some good players at Bolton.

"We have had team changes week after week, but you can't blame the manager for that - he has to keep trying new ideas, but we have people who can play and we can improve."

"One player we might have back is midfielder Peter Reid. He's been out for about a year, but he may be fit again for Saturday."

"Then there's Mike Carter who recently entered the side and looks very promising up front despite coming into a struggling team. As for myself I have got to improve my game as much as anyone else," said Cantello.

STRATTON on Saturday

"On the Albion side we will have to watch Cyrille Regis if he's fit and Peter Barnes who on his day can cause real problems. Then, of course, there's Bryan Robson in midfield."

Derek Spence, Southend

"We have had our troubles but we have got to make the best of it and I'm certainly looking forward to this game. I don't feel we are going to go there and just struggle through," said Cantello.

Cantello will not be the only player up against his old club at the weekend. Down at the Dell Mick Channon and Dave Watson will be out to maintain Southampton's good form this term at the expense of their old team-mates from Manchester City and I can't see them being disappointed.

Notts. County's central defender Jeff Blockley will be doing all he can to keep out his old side Leicester for whom he made 75 appearances. County have fallen away after a good start, but I reckon the spoils could still be shared.

In the Third Division Hull striker Keith Edwards - their top scorer last season with 24 goals - will be looking to add to his tally against his former team Sheffield United.

However, United are on the crest of a wave and I don't for see a happy return for Edwards.

The Blackpool v Southend tie on Friday night provokes keen interest because the two clubs recently 'swapped' strikers. Colin Morris - at one time chased by Chelsea - was transferred from Southend to Blackpool and Derek Spence took the opposite road. I see West Brom's Cyrille Regis... one man Bolton will have to watch if he's fit on Saturday.

Morris as the happier of the two at the end of the game.

A few managers will be up against their old clubs too - Derby's Colin Addison who goes to Highbury, Brighton's Alan Mullery who entertain Spurs and Coventry's Gordon Milne who has to face the seemingly unstoppable Liverpool.

Of the three Alan Mullery may well be the only one left with a smile on his face.

KEITH O'CONNOR, of Urmston, Manchester, asks:

IS IT true that Dave Watson got sent off in his first game for Werder Bremen?

● IT WASN'T his first game, Keith, but his third and it happened against Munich 1860 on August 18 last year.

MARK SHUTTLEWORTH, of Fleetwood, Lancs., asks:

WHO WON the F.A. Cup in 1968 and what was the capacity crowd?

● WEST Bromwich Albion won the 1968 Cup Final 1-0 with an extra-time goal scored by Jeff Astle watched by 100,000 Wembley fans.

ANDREW MOLLINS, of Blackburn, Lancs., asks:

IS IT true that Blackburn Rovers have won the F.A. Cup three times consecutively? If so could you tell me in which years this happened?

● YOU'RE right, Andrew, Blackburn Rovers won the F.A. Cups of 1884/85/86. Queen's Park were their victims in the first two, while West Bromwich Albion lost 2-0 in an 1886 replay.

JILL LEATHERBARROW, of Bolton, Lancs., asks:

WHEN was the Charity Shield first played, and who has won it most times?

● MANCHESTER United were the first winners of the F.A. Charity Shield in 1908 when they beat Queen's Park Rangers 4-0 in a replay after drawing 1-1. United have won it a total of seven times as have Arsenal.

ROBIN PACE, of Holme-on-Spalding Moor, York, asks:

HAVE any teams from the same town ever met in an F.A. Cup Final?

● YES, Robin, on three occasions. In 1932 West Bromwich Albion beat Birmingham City 2-1, in 1967 Spurs defeated Chelsea 2-1 and in 1975, Fulham from the Second Division lost 2-0 to West Ham United.

DAVID WISEMAN, of Winchester, Hants., asks:

IS IT true that Ray Graydon of Aston Villa scored the winning penalty shot in the 1975 League Cup Final?

● RAY GRAYDON, now with Oxford United, scored Aston Villa's penalty winner in the 1975 League Cup Final defeat of Norwich with the only goal of the match.

ROSEMARIE PEREIRA, of Mitcham, Surrey, asks:

WHAT happens when the same club wins the F.A. Cup and the Division One Championship? Which European Cup do they enter?

● TRADITIONALLY the League Champions enter the European Champions Cup in preference to the Cup Winners' Cup. Beaten finalists Leicester City in 1961 and Liverpool in 1972 took the places of Tottenham's and Arsenal's double-winning sides.

GOLDEN GOALS

ERIC GATES (Ipswich) v Southampton, Division One, Saturday, November 24, 1979.

A SPLIT second of pure magic earned Eric Gates the accolade of scorer of BBC television's Match of the Day 'Goal of the Month' for November.

And the way he took it, a fierce right foot shot on the turn, underlined the new found confidence in Gates' play this season.

Said Eric: "I used to dwell too long on the ball in the Reserves and youth team. But now I am hitting them first time as well as laying them off with first time flicks and passes. I put that down to confidence and experience."

"This particular goal, I remember started with me near the half-way line. I pushed it past Trevor Hebbard and played it to Paul Mariner, who swept it out to George Burley overlapping on the right."

"I made my run into the box as George played it up to Alan Brazil, who chested it down, controlled it and tried to do a bit on the ball before he saw me on the edge of the box."

"He rolled it back and I just hit it. Ivan Golac just failed to get his tackle in as the ball flew into the net. It was the sort of shot that could have gone anywhere, but when it goes in it looks great."

"At Ipswich, we work on this type of move. If the ball comes back to you at that distance you are told to hit it – and that's what I did!"

Nice one son . . . skipper Mick Mills lifts Eric Gates aloft to celebrate his golden goal against Southampton.

Cash incentive

OWING to the complaints about non-attacking football, I have thought of a way to stop it.

If a manager pays his players about £200 per week, and for every goal scored a bonus of £50 each, there would be a great deal of goals and good entertaining football.

This would also bring the crowds back to the grounds.

John Summers, Findern, Derby

● Oh yes! We seem to remember Bristol City being offered a King's ransom to beat Nottingham Forest in the League Cup replay. They managed one shot in 90 minutes and lost 3-0.

Remember Wembley!

IN REPLY to Peter Bell's letter about Scottish attendances I would like to say:

Remember Wembley in 1977 and 1979 'The Tartan Invasion'. How many sassenachs (English) could you spot in the crowd. I also recall Brian Moore and Denis Law saying they were trying in vain to spot any English fans. Poor support from Scottish fans? No.

On Saturday I went to the Bells Scottish League Cup final, the attendance was only 27,173 but this was the fourth week on the trot that the Aberdeen fans had to travel to Glasgow but they still came. The Scottish fans I think are the most loyal in the world.

Fraser Henderson, 19 Woodend Place, Aberdeen.

Five Geordies on parade

IN REPLY to Martin Clarke (Dec. 6-12) big deal if Liverpool and Everton had four Scousers each in their derby!

In Newcastle United's Second Division game with Fulham, which they won 2-0, they had no less than five Geordies in the team, three of whom were recently taken from Northern League clubs for a total cost of £25,000!

Beat that if you can!

Martin Quinn, Hartlepool, Cleveland.

Clough and company... no need to moan

SINCE the moves of Keegan, Cunningham and Woodcock to the Continent, we have heard nothing but moans of anguish from Clough and others that top players are going to Europe.

But England has nothing to moan about because for years they've stolen the cream of the Scots, Welsh and Irish. Examples - Dalglish, Gray, James, Flynn, O'Leary and Brady.

Their reasons, bigger wage packets. So why shouldn't your top players go to Europe for more money?

Now, England are even taking players from Europe, South America and even Israel! So I think Brian should... shhhh!

Sean Adams, Dunoon, Argyll.

● Now don't be like that, Sean. It's natural for Scots, Welsh and Irish to want to play alongside such masters as the English. But our players go to the Continent and join foreigners. Ugh! It's just not on.

Clamp down on the cheats

I THINK that all referees and clubs should clamp down on soccer cheats. This, I think, spoils the game and also shows it up. An example was when Spurs played Manchester United in the League Cup. In the second half Mickey Thomas had the ball and Terry Yorath tackled hard to win it. Mickey Thomas made a dive and the referee blew up for a free-kick. We could tell that Thomas had made a dive for when he got up he winked and the 'Sportsnight' cameras caught this but it was too late for from the free-kick United scored to make the score 2-1 in Spurs' favour. In the second leg Spurs lost 3-1 at Old Trafford. There is a way that soccer cheats can be stopped.

(a) by television cameras being installed in all grounds;

(b) instead of referees blowing up for a free-kick, when the ref isn't sure if it was a dive or a foul, a drop-ball should be used - this would benefit both teams and cheating would be stopped.

Robert Pespall, Swansea, W. Glamorgan.

Less violence the answer

IN Steve Coppel's column he said that he thinks that to attract people to football grounds we should have more entertainment.

I would like to disagree on this point. I think that if you go to a football match you go to see goals and good football, not for the entertainment and for somewhere to go for a day out.

Perhaps if there was less violence it would encourage people to go and see their favourite team.

I support Manchester United but because of the violence I am not allowed to go and see them. I think if someone watches on television it is better than not watching at all.

Ruth Henry, Nuneaton.

● I agree with your point about violence, Ruth, but you've got us a bit puzzled about qualifying the word entertainment. Surely, football entertainment IS goals and good football. Send us your full address Ruth - and we'll send you £2!

Rimmer showered

I AM writing to complain about the stupid minority of Norwich and Nottingham Forest 'supporters'.

At Norwich, Aston Villa 'keeper Jimmy Rimmer was showered under a hail of coins and an amazing £9 in change was found in the penalty area and at Forest Pat Jennings of Arsenal had a dart thrown at his left arm and it reached its target. The answer to this, I think, is to keep the area just behind the goal free of fans.

Martin Anderson, East Herrington, Sunderland.

● Full credit to the goalkeepers here. Jimmy Rimmer gave his collection to the ball-boys and Pat Jennings, as great a sportsman as he is a goalkeeper, just pulled out the dart and carried on playing.

Scrap those sponsors

NOW that England again has a respectable team, let us return to a more respectable kit and once again, as in Sir Alf Ramsey's days, wear navy blue and white.

The world recognises England in those colours, we don't need to advertise sponsor's names on the national kit.

Let's have all-white shirts with the '3 lions crest', all-navy blue shorts and all-white socks. The 'silky look' sported by many teams in England, e.g. Forest, Ipswich, Man. City, is acceptable but not the flashes and stripes please.

Shaun O'Brien, Spalding, Lincs.

● Let's worry first about winning something, Shaun, and then I don't think any of us would bother if they wore bikinis covered in black spots and white stripes.

Ossie's second fiddle

WHAT'S happened to Osvaldo Ardiles? Last season he was like a breath of fresh air. Now the tiny Spurs' midfielder seems to have been dragged down to the level of the average First Division schemer.

I feel sorry for him being played up front. I hope Ossie can become his old self again but I wonder if he and Glenn Hoddle can really play together. Both are play makers and a team can't have two such midfield generals.

Last season Glenn was the one out in the cold, now Ossie is playing second fiddle.

Spurs and English football need the talented Argentine playing to his full potential and the only way he can do that is to be made the midfield general again.

Clive Gregory, Brislington, Bristol.

● Steady, Clive! Ossie is as great a player now as last season. It's just that Tottenham have found so much more purpose as a team that no individual looks quite as outstanding any more - that is until Hoddle scores one of his specials!

OUTRAGED!

WELCOME to our new column – Outraged. It stems from many of the outraged views we receive each week from MATCH WEEKLY readers – and which, in turn, outrage MATCH writer, TREVOR HAYLETT. Why not outrage him still further – and win £2 in the process – by sending in your controversial and outrageous views to MATCH WEEKLY. And if you want to comment on his comments, go ahead.

Angry Scots, for instance, should read 'England's bubble too strong . . .

NO WAY TO SPEAK ABOUT THE KING

WHY ALL the fuss about Kevin Keegan? I think he's a terrible player and because you lot at MATCH WEEKLY think he's brilliant this letter won't get printed. For him to be voted European Footballer of the Year is absolute trash – I've seen better players in the Fourth Division. I have watched him play for England and seen him lose the ball dozens of times.

Darrell Taylor (13), Camberley, Surrey.

● What a load of twaddle, Darrell. European Footballer of the Year twice in succession speaks for itself.

Everton? Give me Tranmere any day

IN REPLY to A. Borland (MATCH, No. 14) who mentioned the supporters of Rochdale and Halifax, what about Tranmere Rovers, whose small ground lies in the shadow of the grounds of Liverpool and Everton?

If any of the local population supported Tranmere they would be laughed at, whereas any one of the thousands who turn out every Saturday to watch Liverpool and Everton would be regarded as lucky by the humble Tranmere fans. With the grounds of Liverpool and Everton nearby, who would bother to pay to see humble Tranmere Rovers of the Fourth Division? Surely Tranmere supporters are the best example of stalwart supporters.

Andrew Pattison, Sutton-in-Ashfield, Notts.

● After some of the rubbish I've seen Everton dish up this year I'd much rather watch Tranmere.

Don't knock John Bond

I'VE BEEN listening with great interest to the arguments for and against the importing of foreign stars and particularly the views of Norwich manager John Bond. With all due respect I don't think Mr Bond is qualified to make these statements without having experience in managing foreign stars.

As a Manchester City supporter I have watched the influence foreign stars 'Kazi' Deyna and Dragoslav Stepanovic have had on the younger players at Maine Road. Any measures taken against foreign players will be detrimental to the English game.

Martin Haworth, Bury, Lancs.

● Don't knock John Bond's views on the game. Anybody who takes a team of basically ordinary players near to the top of the First Division knows what he's on about.

England's bubble too strong for Scots

IN REPLY to Peter Bell and his letter about the bursting of the Scottish bubble, he'd better watch it before someone bursts his bubble. The Scottish Premier League is the most competitive in Great Britain and the fans are the keenest and most supportive. Just wait until Hampden when Scotland will burst England's bubble.

David Munro, Ayrshire, Scotland.

● You've burst your own bubble mate. Scotland's Premier League attendances are dismal compared with the English First Division and the game nowhere near as competitive. As for Hampden, here's a forecast – Scotland 1, England 3.

NINE-year-old Richard Ford of 20 Park Gate Road, Cannock Wood, near Rugeley, Staffs., is the sixth and final winner of a super leather football autographed by West Bromwich Albion players.

Richard suggested a comparison of Tony Woodcock of FC Cologne and England and Frank Stapleton of Arsenal and Eire for the Ron Atkinson analysis – and the W.B.A. manager duly obliged . . .

ARSENAL's Frank Stapleton and Tony Woodcock, now making a name for himself in Spearheads!

Woodcock v Stapleton

Analysis by W.B.A. boss Ron Atkinson

Germany following his £650,000 transfer from Nottingham Forest to FC Cologne, are great at spearheading attacks against the foundations of sides.

They possess a different approach to scoring goals, though. Woodcock is about mobility, pace and liveliness. Stapleton has all these things and is also very brave and is prepared to go in for crosses where boots are flying and will score goals by sheer guts.

Woodcock doesn't score as many goals as Frank, yet his skill and his endless endeavour should entitle him to more. Sometimes I've wondered whether he's one of those unlucky players because often when I watched Forest play he appeared to have a lot of chances that just miss, hit the post or bring out the best in a goalkeeper. With a bit more composure he would have stuck one of two more of those away.

Stapleton looks a regular 20-goal a season player which is testament to any top striker in the First Division. He also looks to have worked very, very hard on his game particularly his control. He's prepared now to turn people more when the ball is played into him.

Before, he used to do a lot of the donkey work to let Malcolm Macdonald make breaks, and now with Alan Sunderland alongside him, he looks to have a perfect partner for his own style.

Woodcock is particularly good at turning defenders. His pace is blinding. He never stops working and he's always prepared to drag defenders the full width of the field particularly when he gets on that left-hand side and they find it very disconcerting.

From a shooting point of view although Woodcock has a blistering shot, Stapleton scores here because I feel that he hits the target more often, but Woodcock would come out top on ball control.

Woodcock is brighter with his passing and if he isn't attacking, Stapleton's merely happy to lay off balls to Brady, Rix and Talbot and let those people do the inventive work while he goes searching for places upfield.

Neither are great tacklers but they're prepared to hustle and close people down effectively.

Corners, set plays, any balls that are played into the box – Stapleton's a brave lad and is undoubtedly the better of the two at heading. He climbs so well. Woodcock is useful in the air but the Irishman comes out top, nine to eight for me.

Nine for each of them on stamina; they've got the capacity to work for 90 minutes. Woodcock's greatest asset is his speed and here there's a good margin in his favour.

Gordon Crammond . . . bundle of energy

Pint-sized power

IF THEY are good enough they are big enough! That would seem to be the maxim behind Kilmarnock's £65,000 splash out to sign 30-year-old midfielder Gordon Crammond from Ayr United.

Crammond is a five-foot four-inch bundle of energy and skill and Killie fought off opposition from a number of clubs including Partick Thistle and Motherwell to take him from their county rivals. A former Montrose and St. Johnstone star, Crammond will play a vital part in Kilmarnock's efforts to beat the drop.

Summit to stop star trek south

SCOTLAND's 38 senior clubs hold a crucial summit meeting in Glasgow on Thursday (January 17) to discuss the implications of the Freedom of Contract deal which comes into force next season.

Everyone accepts the deal will go through but the top clubs are desperately worried about its effect as they struggle to keep their top stars, most of whom have eyes on the big clubs down south.

The meeting is the first of a few before the deal is finalised and it seems a lot of tough talking will be done.

If the top teams like Celtic, Rangers, Aberdeen, Dundee United and St. Mirren are to hold on to their best players they will insist on three other major changes.

● Each Premier League club must be allowed to retain the entire gate receipts from home matches.

● The bulk of the cash flowing in from the pools copyright and sponsorship must be channelled towards the Premier Division.

● There must be a fixed scale of compensation for players moving from one club to another on the lines laid down by UEFA.

"We do not know how the other clubs will react," says Aberdeen boss Alex Ferguson. "But our view is that if the clubs go along with the three points, it is entirely possible to pay our players as well and in many cases better than the top clubs in England. For that reason the meeting will be crucial."

In Scotland, any move to change the existing set-up must come by a two-thirds majority vote so obviously there remains a lot of hard talking and lobbying to be done. It's not pitching it too high to say that the future of big-time football in Scotland depends on it.

Road

SCOTLAND face a rough ride before they reach the 1982 World Cup finals in Spain - but Billy Bremner is certain they will make it.

The former Leeds United star, who played such a vital part in the side which reached the finals in West Germany in 1974, is now serving his managerial apprenticeship with Doncaster Rovers but he still retains a

Frankie Gray . . . 'real class'

IAN BALLANTYNE has certainly been hitting the target since he joined Raith Rovers on a £12,000 transfer from Dundee United. Following his hat-trick, which brought Airdrie crashing down in the last game of the year, he scored the only goal in the New Year derby game against Dunfermline.

Sturrock stays

DUNDEE United star Paul Sturrock made it a happy start to the New Year for manager Jim McLean by deciding to withdraw his transfer request and stay at Tannadice.

The classy Sturrock has been attracting the attention of a number of top clubs, including Spurs and Arsenal.

to revival

"It will be tough but Scots will make it" – Bremner keen interest in the national side.

"There is no doubt that recent results have been bad," says Billy. "And it could get worse before it gets better."

"The team is going through a transitional stage but I'm convinced with Jock Stein in charge they are on the right lines. I've no doubt the team will again be in the World Cup finals – provided they get it right off the pitch as well as on it."

"The key player will unquestionably be Kenny Dalglish. I know his form for Scotland has been indifferent but any team with a player of his class must build everything around him. And I'm sure Jock Stein will do exactly that."

"And as far as the other experienced players are concerned, I'm sure Manchester United pair Joe Jordan and Gordon McQueen still have a part to play."

"Joe is starting to score goals – something he didn't do a lot at Leeds and he is always a striker who is prepared to make his presence felt."

"Another player who knows what it's all about is my old team-mate Frankie Gray who is now with Nottingham Forest."

"He has real class and I'm sure will be a key player as Scotland build their attacks from the back."

"The finals, of course, are more than two years away and things could alter quite a bit. Youngsters like Alan Hansen, Graeme Souness and Ian Wallace will obviously be very much involved and between now and then Jock Stein will be trying them out in the national side and allowing them to gain experience at this level.

"The same goes for the home-based youngsters such as David Narey and Bobby Russell of Rangers."

"For that reason, I think the current inconsistency in results will continue for some time. Scottish fans will need a lot of patience."

Bremner is equally adamant that Scotland must get it right OFF the pitch. By that he means a proper run down on the opposition (something lamentably lacking in Argentina), accommodation

Ian Wallace . . . in Stein's plans

Alex visit

ST. JOHNSTONE manager Alex Stuart has been invited back to San Diego to run a coaching clinic as he did last summer.

Says the Saints' boss: "I would like to take up the offer."

"I enjoyed my last visit to the United States and at the moment I am awaiting word on the exact dates."

Billy Bremner . . . toasting Scotland's revival.

(often a sore point among players), and bonuses (a bone of contention in West Germany in 1974).

"This can often be as important as what happens on the pitch," adds Billy. "Knowing Jock Stein he will leave nothing to chance and I just hope he gets the backing from the Scottish F.A. who have sometimes been lacking in that respect in the past."

"Given all that, I have no doubt that Scotland will come through OK. Jock Stein was the popular choice for the job of manager and I have no reason to think that he will not succeed. I certainly hope so."

Bremner, capped 53 times for Scotland, is a man who certainly knows what it's all about. For Scotland's sake everyone hopes his observations are correct.

TARTAN TRIMMINGS

THE SCOTTISH club with the biggest number of players on the books at the end of 1979 was Clydebank. Of the 42 players signed, most of them are under 18. The 'Bankies' with the future in mind, are on the look-out for more.

ALBION Rovers chairman Tom Fagan wants some form of arbitration in deciding whether games should be played or cancelled. After seeing his side lose 4-0 to Falkirk on a pitch which he described as a "scandal", Mr Fagan said there should be more arbitration with managers and even club officials brought in to decide whether a game should be played.

IT COST Hibs £3000 for police charges at the recent game in Edinburgh against Rangers. Plus VAT it made a big hole in the gate receipts and Hibs' chairman Tom Hart could in the 1980's be making representations to the Government on these costs which are hitting football.

He says: "After all, I can never understand why football is singled out when the state pays for the policing of the various demonstrations held." Tom has a point there.

FORMER Hibs' star Alex Edwards may soon be making a further move north. On leaving Hibs he went north to Arbroath. Now Lossiemouth, the Highland League club, are showing an interest in the midfield man.

MOTHERWELL's Christmas present to their supporters was a double buy from Arbroath – defender Joe Carson and striker Albert Kidd, costing the Fir Park club £100,000.

FORMER Ayr United midfielder Joe Fillipi, who joined Celtic two seasons ago, has left Parkhead for Clyde who are struggling to get clear of the foot of the Scottish First Division.

PETER Davidson, the winger Berwick Rangers sold to Queen's Park Rangers, is back at Shielfield six months after his move south. Davidson was sold for £30,000, a record for Berwick, and returned for the same fee, another record. Manager Dave Smith noticed that Davidson had had only a few games for Q.P.R. and decided to buy him back. He said: "We missed Peter more than we realised."

HAMILTON Academicals' goalkeeper Rikki Fleming had to be content to watch his side maintain their promotion challenge over the Festive Period from the sidelines after breaking three ribs during training.

NEXT season's Drybrough Cup will feature the four top Scottish Premier League sides and the top two sides in the First and Second Divisions. The brewery will put up prize money totalling £43,000, with the winners receiving £10,000 and the runners-up £8000.

EURO CHIEFS GET TOUGH

HARD-hitting sanctions will increasingly be brought into effect against clubs who fail to control violence on the terraces.

The warning comes from the Union of European Football Associations (UEFA) in a bid to combat the hooligan problem. Instead of imposing heavy fines, much tougher action will have to be taken, says an article in UEFA's official magazine.

That action could mean:

- Deducting points in competitions,
- Declaring matches forfeit,
- Excluding teams from competitions,
- Closing stadiums,
- Ordering matches to be played behind closed doors or in neutral countries.

At the same time, says the report, public authorities and Courts of Justice would have to subject the hooligans to much more severe punishment than has been the case so far.

"UEFA is determined not to let the popular European competitions become victims of their own success," says the report.

"Never in the 25-year history of our organisation have there been so many incidents as there were at the start of this season and while previously such incidents only happened once in a while, they are now frequent and commonplace."

The report blames the "irrational behaviour of irresponsible fans" and the "unsporting conduct of some of the teams".

West Germany's Klaus Fischer - his goal sent his country on the way to qualifying for the finals of the European Championship in Rome later this year.

Golden gates

INTEREST in soccer in America continues on the up and up. Fourteen of the 24 North American League clubs showed increases in attendances at home games last year.

Of the 14, Los Angeles, San Diego, Tampa Bay, Toronto, Tulsa and Vancouver all showed increases of more than 5,000 a game compared with the season before. At Tampa the average home attendance was up an amazing 10,423 per game.

Eight clubs, however, suffered drops in attendances - including New York Cosmos who were an average of 1,167 worse off per game.

However, the Cosmos still rule OK as far as pulling in the crowds is concerned.

Their average attendance figures for the season were far and away the best in the North American Soccer League last year. Cosmos averaged 46,689. Next best were Tampa Bay Rowdies with 28,546 and then came Minnesota Kicks (24,579) and Vancouver Whitecaps (22,964).

Ta-ra Sara!

ROBERT Sara, the 34-year-old captain of the Austrian national team, is retiring from international soccer.

Sara, who played 54 times for his country, captained Austria from 1975 and as an attacking right-back was one of the key players in Austria's World Cup success in 1978. Austria just missed qualification in Scotland's group for the European Championships. Belgium beat the Scots to qualify last month.

Just too much!

TWO over-excited fans died of heart attacks during celebrations over their team's success. It happened in a stadium at the tropical city of Cali, 200 miles south-east of Bogota. The fans were celebrating the fact that the Red Devils of America had won the overall Colombian championship for the first time in 61 years.

All-star boost

A STAR-studded World XI which included MATCH WEEKLY's own Kevin Keegan, Johan Cruyff and Franz Beckenbauer, went down 3-2 to West German First Division side Borussia Dortmund in a charity match.

The fixture drew a crowd of 35,000 and raised an incredible half-a-million marks (290,000 dollars) for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund. Officials said it was the biggest sports charity purse to date.

The World XI took a 2-0 lead in the match through Yugoslav Susic and his compatriot Petrovic, but Dortmund hit back with three goals in the last 12 minutes.

Franz Beckenbauer in action for his club New York Cosmos. He teamed up with European Footballer of the Year Kevin Keegan and a host of other top stars for a showpiece charity match. However, a defensive error from the great man cost his team a goal (see story).

Pompey to go all the way?

MANY clubs up and down the country kicked off the 1980s hoping – and in some cases believing – they are going to be the team of the next decade.

I am not talking about the Liverpool's, Manchester United's or, dare I say, the Nottingham Forest's of this world.

No, I am thinking more of the sides currently occupying places in the Second, Third or even Fourth Divisions. There are plenty of them with ambition.

And if I'm asked to predict which clubs might break through in the way that Crystal Palace and Brighton have done in recent seasons, you get the biggest pointer from one single factor.

I look at Sheffield and see that when Wednesday and United met for a Third Division game at Christmas there were 49,000 squeezed into Hillsborough. The locals must have thought F.A. Cup Semi-Final day had come early.

Then I look at Portsmouth in the Fourth Division and see that they have been getting 20,000 gates to watch their promotion push. That's almost as many as the European Champions are attracting! I know that Portsmouth and Huddersfield, two of the biggest names from years gone by, are promotion rivals. But if I were asked which one was likely to go all the way through the divisions during the 1980s I would have to go for Portsmouth.

Not since they finished bottom of the table in 1958 – the year Wolves won the title for the second successive year – have Portsmouth been in the First Division, but they are the club attracting big gates now and at the end of the day, that's what you need if you are going to go from strength to strength.

There can be no greater spur for any club than to know that if they come up with the goods then they will get the rewards through the turnstiles.

That must be the way the likes of Sheffield Wednesday

and Portsmouth look upon the future . . . but they have had to give an indication that they are on the way up before supporters would respond.

It makes me angry when I hear people say come and support us then we'll buy players and get success.

You don't do it that way and what's more to the point, you can't do it that way.

STRIKERS

THERE's no denying the goal-power of Liverpool's new found strike force David Johnson and Kenny Dalglish. Their form this season has been incredible and is reflected in our list of top 20 strikers.

Goals are, of course, a factor in their rating with our man at the match, but it is for displaying skill, stamina, temperament and accuracy during 90 minutes that our judges go for and Johnson and Dalglish have those qualities in ample measures.

Our top 20 makes fascinating reading, we think you'll agree — just look at some of those big names, still to make an impression on the leaders!

THE SILKY skills of Crystal Palace youngster Vince Hilaire have shown him to be international class this season and he thoroughly deserved his challenging third place at the half-way mark of our MATCH FACTS dossier.

HALF TERM REPORT

Match Facts . . . The First Division season so far

MATCH WEEKLY's exclusive MATCH FACTS results service has proved fascinating reading since day one of the 1979-80 season — you have written in your hundreds to tell us so.

We're delighted to hear it — and just to bring you up to date on players' progress at the half-way mark of the season, we have compiled — with the assistance of Paul McSweeney, an avid statistician and Crystal Palace fan — a half-term report on the First Division's top goalkeepers, defenders, midfield players and strikers.

To keep the fans of Division Two, Three and Four clubs happy too, there's a list of the leading players from those Leagues, too. Pressure of space prevents us from including them this week but it is planned to include them next week, with the Scottish Premier Division on January 31.

Mike Doyle . . . Stoke's gritty defender

DEFENDERS

MIKE Doyle may be in the twilight of his career but he can still turn in quality performances week after week as our MATCH FACTS reveal. Only Liverpool's brilliant Scottish centre-half Alan Hansen is able to live with Stoke's former Manchester City skipper as they head our run down of top Division One defenders.

Doyle's gritty pedigree is a key factor in Stoke's fight for survival and it's mirrored in his consistency. There was talk of Doyle being allowed to leave the Potteries, but on this form they can't do without him!

GOALKEEPERS

MANCHESTER City seem unable to shake off the threat of relegation after an appalling start to the season and now they've been toppled out of the F.A. Cup by Fourth Division Halifax.

But no blame can be laid at the feet of their giant goalkeeper Joe Corrigan — through it all he has been impeccable.

In an unbroken spell of games from the start of the season big Joe has emerged as the top 'keeper in the First Division for consistency.

Brighton skipper Brian Horton says . . .

'WE'RE TOO GOOD TO GO DOWN'

LIVERPOOL edged Spurs, Crystal Palace won a point at Old Trafford and Celtic walloped Hibernian . . . but it will go down as the day that Brighton beat all the odds.

No one but the most optimistic of Seagulls' fans, would have predicted celebration for the seaside team on that day in mid-November.

But Mullery's men — at that time still struggling desperately to find their First Division feet — came away from the fortress of Nottingham Forest with two points . . . and turned the corner.

Brighton had gone to Forest reeling from a 4-1 defeat at home by Liverpool. The week before they had gone down 3-0 at Highbury to an Arsenal team that had already thrashed them twice in League and League Cup matches. The stark fact was they had not won an away game in the League and home form wasn't that much better.

But at Cloughie's castle began a run which saw Brighton lose just once in ten matches. They found themselves out of the relegation zone for the first time when they beat Wolves 3-1 away from home and now they have grabbed a place in the Fourth Round of the F.A. Cup.

Some revival — and no one is more delighted than Brighton skipper Brian Horton.

"I think we expected it to be hard in the First Division. There is certainly a big difference between the First and Second, but we have always believed we can play in the top Division," said Horton.

"Early on we lost John Gregory and Mark Lawrenson and they have made a big difference now they are back. Peter Ward has started to score again and we got Ray Clarke whose scored a few. Our recent results have taken the pressure off everyone. The whole team has been playing better.

"It was unusual for us to find ourselves struggling because we had been used to being at the top, but even now we know we still have to take it from match to match," added Horton.

"We have changed the system a little, but nothing drastic. Gerry Ryan has been playing a little deeper to make four across the middle, but that's the way most of the top sides play anyway.

"I don't think we ever got despondent.

by Paul Stratton.

There were games which we lost where we should certainly have got a point, like at Coventry and Villa where we lost 2-1, but we were letting in too many goals.

"I definitely think we are good enough to stay up this season," said Horton.

While Brighton were struggling to get away from the foot of the Division, Crystal Palace — promoted at the same time — had a dream start. The comparison was always there to be made and while Palace were being dubbed as the team of the future, Brighton were going straight back down in many people's eyes.

So there must have been more than a little satisfaction on Boxing Day when Brighton took Palace to the cleaners with a 3-0 home win.

"There's no doubt that Palace had a brilliant start, but it's a long, long season," said Horton.

"Obviously when we beat them it gave our fans a tremendous lift. Our supporters have been magnificent all season. We still got the crowds even in the bad times.

"I think now from the sides we have beaten we have proved we can play in the First Division," said Horton.

Brighton manager Alan Mullery has undoubtedly been a big driving force behind the team's revival. He loves the game, loves the involvement and most of all loves to win.

Mullery has made no secret of his ambition and that is to be 'the best manager in the country.'

It's a long hard road to the top but, maybe, not quite so daunting now for Mullery and his Brighton braves.

RIOCH ON ADDISON -BEFORE THE BIG BUST UP

FORTY-EIGHT hours before the verbal clash with manager Colin Addison, which led to him being put on the transfer list, Scottish international Bruce Rioch had paid a handsome tribute to his boss in an exclusive interview with MATCH WEEKLY.

He said: "Colin's a great motivator with a lot of enthusiasm and in that respect he's not unlike Tommy Docherty."

"Because of the circumstances, Colin has a much more difficult task than Dave Mackay, who I believe is the best manager I have served under at Derby."

In fact, Rioch has served under three masters at the Baseball Ground - Docherty, Mackay and, of course, Addison.

He also recalled the fact that this was his second spell at the Baseball Ground. In between, he was with Everton for a season. Docherty brought him back - but that wasn't always the happiest of relationships.

It hasn't always been problems, however. He recalled that first stay with some pleasure, having played in a Derby team which was then one of the best in English football.

He acknowledged the fact, however, that this time things were going to be different and, commenting on the threat of relegation, he continued: "It's going to be a fight to the death for Derby. There's certain to be four teams battling it out."

"I thought this season would be a tough one, but we've been very hard hit by injuries and it does not help when you are constantly having to make team changes."

Rioch had said that he would like to make a name for himself in football management when the day came for him to pack away his boots.

"When you have a successful period you take the points for granted. But when things are not going so well it gives you a chance to sit back and look at some of the reasons why you're not doing so well."

"All the managers I've served under have got something to offer and you've got to pick their brains. You throw out some information and retain that which you think will come in use."

Amazingly after saying he would like to go into management Rioch then spelled out all the factors which would combine to make life difficult for him. He mentioned the unpredictability of the game and the impatience of directors for starters.

"But I love football and it's the only thing I'm interested in, so I'm looking forward to it. Ideally I would like to start off as a coach somewhere and work up but I don't think you can plan that far ahead. You've got to take each opportunity as it comes."

THE rise and fall of Derby County through the 70s is as dramatic as the back-page newspaper stories which went hand in hand with their downfall.

Police investigations followed by allegations of tapping and the inevitable reports of player/manager bust-ups only demonstrated how low standards had dropped at the Baseball Ground - off the field as well as on it.

The man given the Churchillian task of restoring sanity and putting the club back on an even keel was Colin Addison, appointed Rams' boss at the beginning of the season.

Following in the brash and breezy footsteps of Tommy Docherty is hard enough at the best of times. But when Soccer's 'Mr Colourful' had seemed obsessed with selling his best players the task is made doubly difficult.

"We knew it was going to be tough at the start" Addison told MATCH WEEKLY. "People say to me 'is it harder than you expected' but the answer's no."

"I would say, however, that we did not foresee all the injury problems. We haven't moaned about the injuries all season, we've gone out and got on with the job as best as we could."

"But at the end of the day when you lose people of the calibre of Gerry Daly, Roy McFarland and Stevie Powell for so much of the season it's a hell of a blow."

"We know we've got to battle and it looks as though it's going to go to the end of the season but I feel confident that if we stick together and keep morale up we'll be all right.

Colin Addison hardly has a moment's rest in the long struggle to steer Derby away from the relegation zone.

"We've got to start getting some results under our belts now because if we leave it until the end of the season it may be too late."

Addison lists consistency, or rather the lack of it, as Derby's major downfall this season.

Take for instance that wonderful victory 4-1 over Nottingham Forest at the Baseball Ground.

Battl

Bruce Rioch - looked on Addison as a man with great enthusiasm.

Gerry Daly - the Eire midfield man will need to produce match-winning displays between now and the end of the season to keep his side afloat.

Addison says Derby could have afforded a 20 per cent drop in performance after that game and still come out on top in their next two fixtures with Brighton and Manchester City.

But County continued their 'hot and cold' streak and went down on each occasion.

"It was typical of our season," Addison laments. "It has been stop-start all the time. We've had bright spells, some magic moments, but then we've fallen away again. There's just been no continuity."

Addison took one of the toughest jobs going when he agreed to leave the 'safe' post of number two to Ron Atkinson at West Bromwich Albion for the Baseball Ground in the close-season.

One of the top sides in the First Division in the early 70s - Derby won the League Championship in '71-72 and '74-75 - the Rams have been on the slippery downward slope ever since the Board saw fit to dismiss Dave Mackay.

It has been one long tale of woe and managers Colin Murphy and Tommy Docherty have been and gone after failing to revive flagging spirits.

Matters weren't helped by the frequent bust-ups between the volatile 'Doc' and star players like Daly, Rioch and Masson.

Roy McFarland - it's one of the tragedies of modern football that injuries have damaged the career of the Derby and England centre-half.

There was trouble behind-the-scenes and the police mounted an investigation.

Addison had been in hot demand before and had already given the thumbs down to flattering offers from Sunderland and Cardiff. But when Derby got in touch he found that challenge too big to turn down.

"Basically life's a challenge and I realised this job was an almighty task. It would have been easy to say no - we'd had a lot of success with Albion last season and I was already well paid - but I'd set out in the game to become a First Division manager so why not start off at Derby?"

The magic Hatter

MANY critics hinted that Luton Town would not stay the course this season. Their success was a flash in the pan, they said. How could these young upstarts from Bedfordshire make a sustained challenge for a place in the First Division?

The one man for whom their success has been no surprise, however, is manager David Pleat, who has shown complete faith in his squad of young players and is now reaping the benefits.

The secret of the Hatters' challenge has been the quality of their players — skilled performers like 20-year-old coloured midfield star Ricky Hill.

For him this is no new experience. A former England Youth player, he has been catching the eye since he joined the Kenilworth Road staff as an apprentice four years ago. By the time he was 17 he had established himself as a first-team player and although still very young, is now considered as one of the more experienced players in the team.

Attention

Now that he has earned his reputation of being an excellent ball player, with pace and a tremendous shot, MATCH WEEKLY asked Ricky if he found he was coming in for special attention from his opponents.

His answer typified the quiet modesty of this young man: "It is nice to be recognised as a good player," he said. "The manager has given me a lot of praise, but really there is no pressure on me. I just go out there and do my best."

"Things are going quite well at the moment, but as time passes you find that other clubs pay more attention to you. Our midfield of Alan West, Paddy Grealish and myself have got a reputation as a good footballing combination and because of this some clubs now mark us very tightly and try to crowd us out, especially at home. It is hard to break down at times — but we have to, otherwise the team suffers all round."

"But I have not found that any one player has been detailed to stand on me. If they did I would just try to take them out and do my own thing. I will still try and push forward."

Reviewing the first half of the season, Ricky explained why he thinks Luton are doing so well after a dismal start that saw them eliminated from the Football League Cup by Third Division Gillingham.

"The main difference has

HILL'S SKILLS KEEPS LUTON ON COURSE . . .

Luton's coloured midfield star Ricky Hill had established himself as a first-team regular by the time he was 17 years old. Now at just 20, he is considered to be one of the Hatters' most experienced players.

been the return from America of Alan West. Ever since I have been at this club, Westy has been a player I have looked up to and a player that we always know will want to receive the ball and slow it down. Tony Grealish is also good at this and the understanding in the side is really good now."

"As for my own game, there are a few things I would like to improve on, particularly my consistency. Every game is different, but I have to try and find a level par in my performance."

Meanwhile, Hill and his colleagues continue to confound the sceptics with their own pleasing brand of open football, linking results with entertainment, a quality lacking in many sides these days.
